In computer programming, an application programming interface (API) is a set of subroutine definitions, communication protocols, and tools for building software. In general terms, it is a set of clearly defined methods of communication among various components. A good API makes it easier to develop a computer program by providing all the building blocks, which are then put together by the ...

1.1. Accessibility APIs. To provide access to desktop GUI applications, assistive technologies originally used heuristic techniques to determine the meaning of the user interface and build an alternative off-screen model. For example, a row of labels displayed horizontally near the top of an application window might be a menu.
