Cancer represents a significant, and growing, burden on healthcare systems. This is driven, at least in part, by escalating cancer drug budgets. Loss of patent protection on biopharmaceuticals enables the development and production of similar biological medicines, or biosimilars. Biosimilars are currently available for use in oncology in the supportive care setting; the focus of biosimilar ...

Biosimilars in oncology: current and future perspectives

Introduction. Biotherapeutics development has progressively increased in the past two decades. 1., 2., 3. This growth is driven by two main factors: (1) a significant benefit for patients due to highly selective medicines, and (2) a significant benefit for developers due to a high probability of success, multiple indication potential, extended revenue cycle, and significant financial returns.
