in inter partes review and procedures typically used in courts does not lead to the conclusion that inter partes review violates Article III. This Court has never adopted a “looks like” test to determine if an adjudication has improperly occurred outside an Article III court. See, e.g., Williams v. United States, 289 U. S. 553, 563. Pp. 15–16.

The Court Officer, who is a social worker, will start the hearing by “calling the case”. She or he tells the court the name and number of the case and then lets the court know exactly who’s in the courtroom whose part of your case. The lawyers will let the court know their ideas about the case and sometimes there will be witnesses who will testify.

A PARENT’S GUIDE TO CPS and the COURTS

Court of Session and the sheriff court significantly overlap at first instance. Many types of civil court action can be raised in either court according to the pursuer’s choice. Sheriff courts and the Court of Session can also act as courts of first instance or as appeal courts, depending on the circumstances.
