Ciao Gert, useful tips, many thanks! I get a lot of PDF's, mainly from direct clients (hotels and the like) or for legal documents (these last are usually hopeless, as most of the times they are scanned directly from paper documents, plus they include lots of initials, signatures, underlining, notes etc., so OCR's usually make more of a mess of than what they already are…).

Overall this is great software and does exactly what I wanted, which was conversion of .pdf files and digital signature of pdf documents. However, each time I started the program, it would ask for Activation, so the real problem surfaced after using it a week when I received the message that I had exceeded the number of allowed activations.

This document describes a general approach to writing white papers. It answers questions like: • What is the objective of a white paper? • How is it different from other documents with similar content? • How does it "work"? • What are the key parts of a white paper and how are they organized? I recognize that different authors have different views on this subject
